COVID-19: Measures Against Economic Impacts

Information on assistance and tips for businesses during the Corona crisis

As the Corona virus pandemic forces people in the US and Europe to stay at home and leaves companies fretting about economic consequences, businesses across the region are wondering what to do about financial commitments, debt and staff.

Below, you will find current information on assistance and tips for companies during the Corona crisis that will be steadily updated:

Measures on the European Level

The European Commission has provided its member states with a temporary framework of aid to support the economy. Among other things, the new framework allows member states to grant subsidies or relief of 500,000€ to companies and to secure loans with state guarantees.

The European Commission also coordinates daily meetings with the European Health Ministers and Ministers of the Interior. An initial package of measures was announced on 13 March, and further initiatives are being announced almost daily. The EU response includes a combination of direct EU-level financial aid, new legislation, and increased flexibility in the enforcement of EU state aid rules to facilitate the adoption of local member state measures.

The main fiscal response to the Corona virus will come from member states' national budgets. EU state aid rules enable member states to take swift and effective action to support citizens and companies, in particular SMEs, facing economic difficulties due to the COVID-19 outbreak.

On 22 March, the European Commission approved two aid schemes with which Germany intends to support its economy following the outbreak of the virus. The schemes notified by Germany were adopted on the basis of the temporary framework for state aid to support the economy in response to the current outbreak of COVID-19.

Measures in Germany

The federal government is acting resolutely to counter the economic effects of COVID-19. A set of far-reaching measures is to safeguard jobs and support companies. Firms are being furnished with sufficient liquidity so that they can survive the crisis.

On 23 March, the federal cabinet has launched a huge aid package for business and citizens. On 25 March, the Bundestag is expected to pass several laws in a fast-track procedure, and also to put into effect an emergency regulation for the debt brake, which will allow the federal government new loans of 156 billion euros. On 26 March, the Bundesrat is expected to vote in favor. Once the Bundestag and Bundesrat have made their decision this week, the self-employed and companies can soon expect immediate aid. Direct aid of 9,000 euros is planned for companies with up to five employees. The sum is planned for three months. Companies with up to ten employees can apply for direct aid of 15,000 euros.

Furthermore, the social security contributions for March and April can be deferred on request without interest and without the provision of collateral. On 27 March, entrepreneurs and self-employed persons would have to transfer the social security contributions for the month of March for their companies to the social security institutions. In an emergency, these could be very high amounts and place an additional financial burden on companies that have run into problems due to the Corona crisis.

Businesses will probably need more time to find solutions to overcome the consequences of the crisis. For this reason, relief is provided for insolvency law in order to avert insolvencies where possible. The currently severely limited opportunities for meetings can have an impact on the ability of many businesses to act if they prevent important decisions from being made. But associations, cooperatives and condominium owners' associations can also be affected. For this reason, the federal government is taking various measures to ensure the capacity to act and the quorum. Stock corporations can now hold virtual general meetings for the first time.

The protective shield for employees and companies comprises the following measures in particular:

1. Short-time allowances can be granted on a more flexible basis. It will be easier for companies to obtain such allowances. They are eligible to apply, for instance, if ten percent of employees are affected by a loss of earnings.
2. Companies' liquidity will be improved by means of tax measures. It will be easier to defer tax payments and reduce the amount of advance payments. There will be no foreclosures or late payment fines in cases related to the effects of coronavirus.
3. Companies' liquidity will be protected via new measures of unlimited scope. Existing liquidity assistance schemes, such as KfW and ERP loans, will be expanded and made available to more companies.
4. Economic Affairs Minister Peter Altmaier and Finance Minister Olaf Scholz will also call for coordinated and resolute action at European level. The Federal Government welcomes, among other things, the European Commission's idea of a 'Corona Response Initiative' worth 25 billion euros.

The KfW Special Program 2020 will be in effect from March 23. Applications can be submitted with immediate effect. The funds for the KfW Special Program are unlimited. It is available to small and medium-sized enterprises as well as large enterprises. The credit conditions will be improved again.

Measures in the US

The US administration wants to assemble a massive stimulus package aimed at preventing the US economy from plummeting into its worst collapse since the Great Depression, as fears about the coronavirus pandemic brought much of American life to a standstill.

- On April 30, 2020 the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve published two updated term sheets and one new term sheet for the Main Street Lending Program, which will be funded by three Federal Reserve facilities under Section 13(3) of the Federal Reserve Act, along with FAQs that may from time to time be updated. - Supply chain finance programs have been becoming increasingly common in the commercial markets in recent years. The popularity of these programs has been driven by conflicting working capital needs of companies and their suppliers - the former wish to extend their payables while the latter wish to both shorten the term of their receivables and reduce the cost of working capital. - EXIM's Working Capital Guarantee Program facilitates loans from commercial lenders to creditworthy U.S. businesses that export over the term of the loan. It is an asset-based lending program where the amount the borrower/exporter can borrow is determined by availability on a borrowing base. Borrowing base availability is calculated based on export-related inventory and accounts receivable based on formula advance rates. Find out more.
- In numerous discussions with exporters, lenders and other EXIM stakeholders about the temporary problems caused by the COVID-19 crisis, it was clear that there was concern regarding the inability to finance pre-delivery or pre-export payments owed to manufacturers during the manufacturing process. ### Republicans and Democrats in Congress agreed on the details of the package

On March 25, 2020, the US Senate unanimously passed the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act of 2020. With more than US$2 trillion in total relief and US$350 billion in support for small businesses, this bill, if enacted, would represent the third phase of legislation intended to help families and companies affected by the coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) outbreak. The small business-related provisions in the bill largely reflect elements of an emergency relief package that was developed by a small business task force headed-up by Senate Committee on Small Business & Entrepreneurship Chairman Marco Rubio (R-FL); Senate Special Committee on Aging Chairman Susan Collins (R-ME); and Senate Committee on Health, Education, Labor & Pensions Chairman Lamar Alexander (R-TN). In anticipation that the small business provisions in the CARES Act will be reflected in the final bill agreed to by the House and enacted into law, this alert describes programs provided under all three phases of legislation that are intended to provide much-needed support for US small business concerns through this crisis. It concludes with a summary of the bankruptcy-related provisions in the CARES Act.

Further Information

President Trump signed a coronavirus relief package into law that provides paid leave benefits and additional unemployment benefits for US workers. The package, which will take effect by 2 April, includes new federal employee-benefit mandates and offers these provisions for employers:

- Tax credits for businesses with fewer than 500 employees to cover:
  - Two weeks of paid sick leave for employees who have been quarantined, have a sick family member, or have been affected by school closings.
  - Up to three months of paid family and medical leave amounting to two-thirds of regular pay for those employees listed above.

- The option for the Labor Department to exempt businesses with fewer than 50 employees from abiding by the paid leave mandate, if the Labor Department decides the new law could pose an existential threat to the company.

Recently, President Trump also signed a bill that allows the Small Business Administration to issue an estimated $7 billion in low-interest loans. The US Small Business Administration announced that small businesses with financial burdens caused by the pandemic that don't have credit available elsewhere can be eligible for loans of up to $2 million with a 3.75 percent interest rate (2.75 percent for nonprofits).

The details are subject to change as congressional leaders and the White House continue negotiating the nearly $2 trillion package. Republicans and the administration have also resisted demands by Democrats and governors for aid to the states, whose governors have requested $150 billion to shore up budgets strained by large new costs and plummeting tax revenues.
